ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method includes receiving a current residual vector. The current residual vector is compared to a plurality of historical residual vectors. Each historical residual vector has an associated fault classification code. At least one of the historical residual vectors is selected responsive to determining that the current residual vector matches at least one of the historical residual vectors. A fault condition is classified based on the fault classification code associated with the selected historical residual vector.